Bringing a complaint to the Health Service Ombudsman

What the Health Service Ombudsman does

The Ombudsman, Ann Abraham, provides a service to the public by undertaking independent investigations into complaints that the NHS in England has not acted properly or fairly, or has provided a poor service.

The Ombudsman can look at complaints about hospitals, GPs, dentists, pharmacists, opticians, nurses, the Ambulance Service and others providing NHS services.

Before contacting us

The Ombudsman will normally only take on a complaint after you have first tried to resolve the complaint with the Trust or practice and you have received a response from them. The Ombudsman believes that the Trust or practice should be given a chance to respond and, where appropriate, try to put things right before she becomes involved.

A complaints form which gives all the information you need to make a complaint to the Ombudsman can be found at:
www.ombudsman.org.uk

When we receive your complaint

We will write to you to acknowledge your complaint within two working days. You will be given a reference number which would be helpful to quote in any future contact with the Ombudsman.

Our first step will be to look at whether the complaint is one that we can handle, because we can only investigate complaints where we have the legal power to do so. You do not have an automatic right for your complaint to be investigated but if we decide not to do so, we will let you know why we have made that decision.

We are committed to keeping you informed about progress and will be in touch regularly to update you. You can contact us at any time for advice or to find out more about our service. Our contact details are on the back of this leaflet.
